Bringing the classroom to you.

You sit down at your home computer and log in before your class. Earlier this week, you reviewed the presentation posted by your instructor, who has 15 years of experience teaching WOC nursing students. The presentation inspired you to post a discussion to the bulletin board for the entire class to consider. Since then, another student in your virtual classroom has made a valid counterpoint to your statement. But your instructor, knowledgeable to the last, has provided further insight in a posting which balances both perspectives. Class time comes, and you join the live classroom for your instructor's vibrant discussion.

No matter where you live, if you're close to a computer you're close to the webWOC Nursing Education Program. The program is offered in partnership with Metropolitan State University in St. Paul, Minnesota, and our faculty is experienced in both WOC certification preparation and online teaching. There is no weekly travel requirement or extended stay away from home or work—only a one-time immersion experience located in St. Paul. There, you'll meet fellow students and faculty, and begin to develop your network of adult professionals in your field.

Learn in a global community.

This is not a correspondence course. It's a true classroom experience, where students can participate from all over the English-speaking world. The program has been carefully developed based on years of teaching students like you. Within this true classroom experience, you'll have live online classes with faculty while participating in case studies, threaded discussions, faculty presentations, required readings and testing. You'll develop contacts and a network within your new professional nursing community—and you'll graduate on-time with your class.

The webWOC Nursing Education Program is both challenging and thorough. It must be rigorous so you can properly prepare for the WOCN certification exam, and knowledgeably care for your patients. Complete preparation is key to your success. Studies show that testing anxiety can greatly affect examination scores. To combat testing anxiety, the webWOC Nursing Education Program offers online practice testing in the same environment as the real exam. So rest assured knowing you'll only be tested on your WOC knowledge, not your technological savvy.

Courses that fit your active lifestyle.

The webWOC Nursing Education Program encourages you to take the full scope of practice to best enhance your professional development—and better serve your patients' needs. But you can also take individual courses specializing in wound, ostomy or continence. Graduate-level credit is awarded for all completed coursework.

As an active nursing professional, you may create the most convenient schedule possible, as the webWOC Nursing Education Program offers two sections—a weekday or a Saturday class. Class does not meet every week, so check the current semester course schedule for complete details.
